The Daily Gazetteer.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 4. 1737.

THERE is, perhaps, no greater Incitement to noble Actions, than the Love of Fame; which we ought, therefore, carefully to encourage, where-ever we meet with it: But the Misfortune is, that a too eager Thirst after it is very often the greatest Obstacle in our Way. We are for having the Prize, before we have run the Race; we are for running the Race, before we are sufficiently prepared: By this Means, tho' we promise well at first setting out, we want Strength to carry us thro' the Course, and are at last shamefully distanced. Young Men are apt to be hurried away with the Strength of their Passions, and their Judgments are too weak to govern them; else they would perceive an early Reputation scarce possible to be attained, and in Prudence not to be desired. If they will not wait till proper Harvest-Time before they begin Reaping, they may flatter themselves with a plentiful Crop; but it will on Trial be found only Chaff and Straw. A prudent Architect will secure a good Foundation, before he raises his Work; without it a Building may for a while appear fair to the Eye, but can never be of long Duration. Besides, if we take too long Strides, it raises the Envy of our Competitors; but when we gain the Pre-eminence by degrees, they are imperceptibly taught to submit to it. Should at any time a young Man, just brought into the House of Commons, endeavour to rank himself with the first in Reputation and Experience, would he not render himself ridiculous by the Attempt, and even destroy that degree of Fame which he might otherwise deserve? There is a young Man of my Acquaintance, that, was it not for a weak Judgment and an over-bearing Disposition, might, perhaps, not be entirely despicable: But these have made him look upon himself as a great Man, and by assuming that Character, which he is by no means able to support, he is become the Object of Ridicule, instead of Praise. I would advise him, before another Sessions, to read Tully's Oration against Cæcilius. Cæcilius was a young Man of Fortune, quite unacquainted with Business, but very desirous of appearing in a Cause against Hortensius, who was at that Time one of the most able and most experienced Orators at Rome: The Sicilians, who were the Complainants against Verres, had desired Tully to undertake their Cause; yet this forward young Man not being willing to submit, the Matter was brought before the Prætor for his Determination. Where Tully pleading for himself against Cæcilius, after several Arguments peculiar to that Case, advises him, Again and Again, to consider his own Abilities, the Greatness of the Cause he would undertake, the Adversary with whom he was to contend: How often, says he, will he leave it to your Choice to admit a Fact done or not done; to be true or false, and, which ever way you determine, turn the Argument against you? Yet this, says he, you do not fear, this you do not guard against, and, if you have selected any trite Expressions out of an old Oration, imagine you come sufficiently prepared; when, even though nobody was to answer you, the Undertaking is too great for your Capacity. Is there no Business now too weighty for Striplings? Is there no Hortensius now that a Cæcilius should be afraid of contending with? But I fear my young Man has Vanity enough to put himself in the Place of Tully, and not of Cæcilius: But let him consider, that every one who has the same natural Imperfections with Tully, has not therefore the same natural Perfections; tho' his Neck should be as long, his Body as slender; yet his Voice may not be as sonorous, his Action may not be as good: Nay, tho' his Verses should be as bad as Tully's, yet it does not follow that his Orations shou'd be as good. But this young Man need not be at much trouble to find out in what he agrees with Cæcilius. He knows the Disadvantage of Pocket Speeches, when, if his Memory fails, he must either have recourse to his Paper, or be obliged to sit down in the Middle of an Harangue. He knows the Disadvantage of contending with Men of Business and Experience, especially in Matters of Account. Yet I can imagine (because I have seen it) that such-a-one may be deluded enough to look upon himself as a Person of real Consequence, and not see that he is raised by a Party as a proper Tool for their present Purposes, and whom they can at any time pull down, when those Purposes are served. Over fond of Praise, and easy to be flatter'd, he may fansy all to be real Commendation that is bestow'd upon him: Nay, he may arrive at such a pitch of Vanity, that sooner than not spread any thing that is wrote in Praise of him, he will be the Reader of it himself. But out of Compassion to the young Man, who, I hope, will stand corrected, I will add no more at present; and heartily wish he may profit by what I have already said.

To the Author of the DAILY GAZETTEER.

SIR,

YOU have been instrumental in communicating to the Publick a very remarkable Passage from the great Lord Bacon, concerning the Mediatorial Scheme of a Book entitled, The Cure of Deism; without giving in the Page where it is to be found: And as that Quotation never before occurr'd to the Author of that Book, nor can as yet be found by him in the Abridgment of that Lord's Works; Seeing it is received as an unexceptionable Confirmation of the Truth of that Scheme being really founded in the Nature of Things; coming from Such a Person it is of great Weight and Moment, and admired as such by many Readers, tho' found in the Original by none as yet, that I can hear of. At the same Time I solemnly declare, I had no Hand, directly or indirectly, in inserting it in your Paper, I am the more obliged, by your Means, to return Thanks to the Gentleman that did; and do hereby declare, That I shall think myself doubly obliged, if he will be so good, at his Leisure, as to advertise the Publick, in what Book and Page of Lord Bacon's Works, that Passage is to be met with. This is but a reasonable Request from a sincere Lover of Truth,

The Author of the CURE OF DEISM.

LONDON.

We hear from Sevenokes in Kent, That on Monday last, the Day of celebrating his Majesty's Birth-Day, the Right Hon. the Lord Viscount Vane gave a grand Entertainment, at his Seat at Fairlawn; and in the Evening there was a Bonfire in the Park, and a Hogshead of Strong Beer for the Populace.

His Majesty has been pleased to appoint George Jackson, Esq; an Eminent Merchant, who has resided many Years at Leghorn, to be Consul at Genoa, in the Room of John Bagshaw, Esq; lately deceas'd.

Yesterday about 8 in the Evening the Lady Porten, Relict of the late Sir Francis Porten, One of the Aldermen of this City, retired to her Chamber, at her House in Leadenhall-street, seemingly in perfect Health; and being about 9 o'Clock called to Supper, was found dead, to the great Surprize of the Family.

The Rev. Mr. Boney is appointed Afternoon Preacher at Berwick-street Chapel, in the Room of Mr. Rowell, deceased.

Yesterday Morning William Sands, Esq; kiss'd his Majesty's Hand at St. James's, on his being appointed a Captain in the Royal Regiment of Horse, Red, commanded by the Right Hon. the Earl of Pembroke.

Last Week the Rev. Mr. Edward Lye, M. A. Vicar of Little Houghton, was inducted into the Rectory of Yardley Hastings, in the County of Northampton, void by the Death of the Reverend Mr. Patty, the last Incumbent.

Last Tuesday Morning David Clinton, of Craneford, in the County of Middlesex, Esq; was attacked on Hounslow-Heath by 2 Highwaymen, who robbed him of a Watch, 4 Guineas, and a Gold Ring, and then made off towards the Powder-Mills.

Wednesday in the Afternoon Four Persons were Convicted before Justice Wroth, of Old-street, for selling of Gin, in less Quantity than 2 Gallons; 3 of them paid the Penalty of 10 l. and the other was committed to Clerkenwell Bridewell.

The Informer that was mobb'd and beat in the Strand on Wednesday last, is since dead. This is the second Person that has been murder'd this Week, for informing against People for selling of Gin.

Mr. Jeremiah Marlow, an eminent Goldsmith at Aldgate, had the Misfortune to break his Leg, as he was coming thro' the Paved Alley by the Half-Moon Tavern in Cheapside. The Accident happened by striking his Leg against the Shutter of a Cellar-Window, which was carelessly left open.

Yesterday died, at his House the Corner of Bucklersbury, Cheapside, Mr. Morse, an Eminent and Wealthy Druggist.

On Wednesday last died suddenly at St. Alban's, in returning to London from their Seat in Cheshire, the Lady of Counsellor Davenport, of Bloomsbury-Square. She was the Daughter of John Ward, Esq; the great Conveyancer, and has left 10 Children living, who with her Husband and Parents are Inconsoleable for so great a Loss.

Yesterday died at her House at Clapham, Mrs. Clarke, Relict of the late Rev. Mr. Matthew Clarke, and Mother to Dr. Matthew Clarke, one of the Physicians of Guy's Hospital.

On Wednesday Night last died, at his House in Tower-street, Mr. Wollaston Barcis, an Eminent Dutch Merchant.

A few Days ago died, at his Lodgings at the Three Crowns in Gracechurch-street, Rowland Davenet, Esq; a Gentleman of a considerable Estate; and Yesterday Morning his Corpse was carried out of Town, to be interr'd among his Ancestors in Salisbury.

Yesterday was paid at the Pay-Office in Broad-street, the Wages due to the Company of his Majesty's Fireship, the Bridgewater, to the Time they were removed into the Aldborough.

This Day upwards of 20 Sail of Men of War will be Recalled at the Pay-Office in Broadstreet. The Short Allowance Money due to the Companies, will be paid at the said Office.

On Wednesday Night last a Person dress'd like a Footman, in Boots, was taken up, exposing to Sale several Knobs of Brass of Gentlemen's Coaches and Chariots. The Shop-Keeper stopp'd the Goods, and told him if he could give an Account of himself, and how he came by them, he would give him a Consideration; but he pretended to justify himself, and a Coachman coming into the House, and hearing them talk of the Affair, had the Fellow secured. When he was searched, there were found on him no less than 20 Knobs of Gentlemen's Coaches; and Yesterday he was committed to Newgate by Sir Richard Brocas.

Yesterday Hannah Woodhouse was committed to Bridewell by Col. De Veil, for Retailing Spirituous Liquors. As was Abraham Davenport to Newgate, for stealing a Silver Tankard out of the House of Mr. Henry Uvedale of Fleet-street, Victualler. This Abraham Davenport is the same who was admitted an Evidence about three Years ago against William Lewis, with whom, in six Weeks Time, he committed 26 Street Robberies. One of the Accomplices of the Gang that he has now lately robbed with, has discover'd the whole Gang to the said Col. and in all Probability they will be soon taken, several Street Robberies having been committed by them, and some of the Persons robbed are known. Three of the Thieves are in hold, and committed by Col. De Veil.

Yesterday the Lord Chancellor, the Earl of Wilmington, the Speaker of the House of Commons, and Judges, met in the Court of Exchequer, and nominated three Gentlemen out of each County, for his Majesty to prick down one to serve the Office of Sheriff for the Year ensuing, whose Names are as follow:

We are deſired by Mr. Wilſon of the Old Regiſter and Lottery Office, at Young Man's Coffee-houſe, Charing-Croſs, to inform thoſe Gentlemen and Ladies, who are inclinable to Purchaſe Shares of Tickets, that on the 14th of this Month, at which Time the Lottery begins Drawing, he will then cloſe his Book of Shares, the Original Tickets of which are now depoſited in the Hands of an Approved Banker. The continual Demand at his Office for Tickets, has induced him to ſecure a large Number, in Order to enable him to ſupply the Town with Undrawn Tickets, even till the laſt Day of Drawing; during the whole Time of which, Ready Money may be had at his Office for Blanks and Prizes, on the moſt reaſonable and eaſy Terms. He will likewiſe (by Mr. Jernegan's particular Appointment) continue to diſpoſe of Receipts in his moſt Ingenious and Advantageous Sale, in the ſame Manner; a large Number being laid aſide for that Purpoſe. And whereas no Perſon can with Certainty take an Account both of the Numbers, as drawn in the Bridge Lottery, and the Order in which the Blanks ariſe, according to Mr. Jernegan's Scheme, Mr. Wilſon has engaged for an immediate Account to be ſent him, from One of Mr. Jernegan's Clerks, placed in the Hall for that Purpoſe; therefore ſuch who Regiſter Receipts with him, or Buy, during the Drawing, may depend on all the Certainty and Exactneſs imaginable, being his Accounts will every Night be tallied with Mr. Jernegan's.
